

Headquartered in New York, Butter Beans Inc. provides healthy meals and food education for bodies and minds through our tasty, nutritious school lunch program, Food & Garden Summer Camp, and After-School Cooking Classes aimed at improving the health and wellbeing of children today. Butter Beans Cooking Classes teach students about food seasonality, international cuisines, nutrition, and mindfulness through creative and collaborative recipes.

We seek an enthusiastic and reliable After-School Cooking Class Teacher who is passionate about healthy eating, cooking, nutrition, and teaching children how to create nourishing meals. This position will report directly to the Wellness Program Coordinator.

Duties and Responsibilities:

- Lead after-school cooking classes, which include teaching culinary skills, nutrition information, food literacy, and agricultural understanding.
- Ensure all materials and ingredients are ready for class each week, and guide the successful completion of recipes during class time.
- Ensure the health and safety of all students in the program: good hygiene, food safety, and responsible use of knives.
- Foster a collaborative learning environment for students to explore new cuisines, food literacy, and a deeper understanding of healthy food systems.
- Help inspire and motivate students to try new foods & make healthy food choices by setting the example and promoting dynamic class participation.

Qualifications:

- Demonstrated experience in teaching children, ages 4-15
- Strong classroom management skills and understanding of student safety
- Dependable team player and problem solver
- Resourceful, dynamic, patient and flexible
- Strong work ethic and a good sense of humor
- Excellent communication skills, creative and open to sharing ideas
- Knowledgeable about culinary skills, nutrition, and food education
- Passionate about creating healthy communities through nutritious and seasonal meals
